Machine guns don't go with artillery pieces. Furthermore, if a war-time division has a complement of 14,500 men and a machine gun squad is composed of four men, what would you do tactically with 3,500 - odd machine guns? During the war there were training units of battalion size for machine gunners but the highest organized unit of is the Antiaircraft Company with mounted machine guns.
the First Independent Red Bunner Army (PERVAYA OTDELNAYA KRASNOZNAMENNAYA ARMIYA).
is the Far Eastern Army which has existed for a long time, even before World War II.
Duty in this army, as well as in other parts of the Far East such as the Kuriles, Maritime Province, Chukotka and Kamchatka Peninsulas, and the Bering Sea is considered to be either punishment or obligation of service. Soviet officers presently serve three years in the Soviet Union, exclusive of the Far East, and three years in either Germany, Poland, Austria, Hungary or the Far East. One year in a seastern post counts as three years for service. Thus, a three year term in the Far East counts as name years for longovity purposes. In addition, his family may be freed of cortain taxes while he is in the Far East or else he may receive extra pay for his service there.]
Naturally an officer prefers service in the Soviet Jnion where his life is comparatively free. In Germany or Austria life for Soviet armed force members is almost like prison. EM don't get outside the barracks except in conducted groups. Older sergeants and officers have somewhat more freedom but fraternization is completely forbidden. A person can be sent back to USSR for punishment just for dancing with a German girl. But as for a personal preference between the Jovet Far East and Europe, the Soviet officer might prefer the Far East where he can have his family although the life is uncomfortable.
In Poland life is freer, inasmuch as the Polish Army is considered nearly the same as the Soviet Army. Soviet officers enter the Polish Army, receive Polish citizenship, wear Polish uniforms, speak the Polish language, and are called by Polish equivalents of their Russian names. They receive credit for this service as if they had served in the Soviet Army, and receive 10% extra pay for knowledge of a foreign language. Soviet army officers who are appointed as advisors to other armies retain their Soviet status and act as the political eye of the Soviet Government.
